5 Inspiring Career Lessons From Pat Summitt

Tuesday, legendary basketball coach Pat Summitt, the winningest coach in NCAA history, died at the age of 64 after battling early onset dementia. Summitt was a singular figure in women's (and men's) sports, mentoring hundreds of students over her 38-year career and inspiring countless women in innumerable ways.

As a coach, Summitt was guided by a set of principles she called the "Definite Dozen." It includes maxims like "Take Full Responsibility," "Make Winning an Attitude," and "Handle Success Like You Handle Failure."
