Quarterly Market Review

The Markets

Robert Burns, father of fourteen and writer of Auld Lang Syne, once said, "There is no such uncertainty as a sure thing." Was he ever right!

Here are a few sure things:

- The Federal Reserve intends to reduce economic stimulus by tapering quantitative easing (QE).
- Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke plans to retire.
- Gross Domestic Product (GDP) growth was positive in Europe during the second quarter.

Here are some of the uncertainties which may arise from them:

- When will QE begin to end? How will changes in the program affect world economies and markets?
- Who will be the new Fed chairman? What policies will be pursued?
- Was the second quarter a turning point for the Euro area economy? Is Europe moving out of recession?

Is it the Beginning of the End?

Last Tuesday, Eurostat, which provides statistical information on the European Union (EU), announced that its flash estimate showed positive economic growth (up 0.3 percent) for the Euro area for the second quarter. Media outlets embraced the news with tremendous enthusiasm and some informed the world that Europe was, once again, on its feet.

LPL Financial kicked off their focus13 national conference on Monday at the San Diego Convention Center. Dan Gensler and his team were there to learn about the latest developments in technology and client services, as well as network with their industry peers.

"Every American has a right to achieve their vision of financial independence through a relationship with a trusted advisor, and there are none better than you. You are making a difference in America." These words from Robert Moore, president of LPL Financial. And to help advisors continue to Make a Difference, which is this year's conference theme, LPL Financial is rallying around another important message: to become a smarter, simpler and more personal LPL.

Industry leaders and respected speakers, such as Colin Powell former Secretary of State and Zanny Minton-Beddoes, economic editor for The Economist are scheduled to speak this week to the thousands of LPL Advisors in attendance from all throughout the United States.
